Dairy cattle owners should consider adding vitamins A and D to the ration and injecting cattle with this material.

Vitamin D should be the determining factor. The computation for a ration is divide 60,000 by the average pounds of concentrate fed per head per day times 2,000. This will determine the units of vitamin D to be added per ton of feed. For example, if you are feeding 15 pounds of concentrate per head per day - - divide 15 into 60,000 and multiply by 2,000. This shows that you should add 8 million units of vitamin D per ton of concentrate.

The Virginia Tech Dairy Department is also recommending that when a cow is dried off she should receive an injection of A and D and again 10 to 15 days before breeding.

A new sweet potato variety Painter has been released. Seed will be available in 1977. It is not as productive as Jewel and Centennial.

Virginia Flue Tobacco growers will have 33% of their 1976 crop planted to Coker 347 and 29% to Coker 319. However, the biggest increase is McNair 944; last year 5% of the crop was in this variety - - it's up to 11% this year.

Stocks on April 1 are up over the same period last year - - corn 27%, wheat 42% and soybeans 31%.

Broomsedge is widespread in pasture and hay fields. This plant is not palatable to cattle after it becomes 6 to 8 inches tall. It has the ability to grow on hot, dry soils; soils that are low in phosphorus and potash and pH levels below 5.5.

What can be done about broomsedge? Raise pH above 6.0, increase the p and K levels, re-establish desirable grasses and legumes and keep fields grazed or mowed in order to keep the broomsedge plants short and tender. It should be emphasized that overgrazing can encourage broomsedge.

Nitrogen fertilizer can increase orchardgrass hay yields; a four year test shows. For each additional 50 pounds of N per acre up to 200 pounds, a ½ ton per acres increase can be expected.
